

Winter Fox

TIME: 60 min

MATERIALS

- White paper or card stock
- Pencil & eraser
- Sharpie
- Thin and thick paint brushes
- White acrylic paint
- Blue, black and orange tempera paint (we use paint pucks)

STEPS

- Start by drawing your fox in the middle of the page with pencil. We do this directed drawing style, starting with the face, then the body and tail.
- Next, add a wavy line for the snow and the outline of a few trees.
- Once the pencil outlines are done, trace all pencil lines with the Sharpie. Erase pencil lines.
- It's now time to paint. Here's the order that I suggested for my students: Orange, Blue, White, Black
- *I didn't have them paint the fox's white bits since we had white paper. If you're using manilla coloured paper, you could always use a white crayon or white pastel for this part.
- When painting, you may find that you cover some of the lines, no problem! Just wait for it to dry completely and you can go over those lines with your Sharpie.
- To make the snowflakes, I mix a tiny bit of water with some white acrylic paint and then use a large brush to splatter. I usually do this outside. If you're going to do it inside, put a table cloth down to protect your table or floor.
